DUCT.

RESULTS OF THE RACES-THE COPYRIGHT HEARING POSTPONED.

The five races decided at Aqueduct yesterday were devoid of any sensational features, yet the contests they furnished were entirely satisfactory to those who had journeyed out to the track. Copyright, who was scheduled to start in the third race, was withdrawn, and this sent abroad a rumor that the association had decided to refuse his entry in the future, but the story proved unfounded. He was ordered scratched by the officials, as Captain T., who was a starter in the same race, is a stable mate, and under the rules of racing two horses from the same stable are not permitted to start in a selling race.

The hearing on the protest lodged against this horse, to whom was awarded a purse on Thursday, has been postponed until to-morrow. The postpone-ment was caused by the unavoidable absence of Frank Clarke, who made the protest. He has promised to be on hand to-morrow.

The opening race yesterday looked and proved to be a gift to Septour. His races at Bennings warranted a short price against him, and the plungers gladly accepted 1 to 3. For the first half of the journey they had a chance to do some guessing, but at the end of seven furlongs their minds were at ease again. Doggett was riding Septour hard as he passed the finish, but for all that he won handily, as he is a colt that must be urged, even to hold his Rifler captured the second race. In his previous races he had been beaten off, yet he had a strong following and won in good style. All the spring this colt has been talked of as a high-class youngster, and he may develop into one later on; but just now his action is too much of the climbing order to warrant any great expectations of him. Young Harry, the favorite, ran a disappointing race. A poor rider was, in a measure, responsible for the With Coypright and Annie Bishop out of the third race, Charade seemed to have dropped into a soft spot, but this opinion could not have been a very general one, for even money was always obtainable against him, Captain T. being played to beat him. For seven furious the last named managed to make a contest of it, then he subsided and Charade

The fourth race, which was for two-year-old fillies, furnished a decided favorite in Nana H. It was her first bid for public honors, but rumors of a half-mile trial in 49½ seconds brought her a host of supporters. Her race failed to uphold their confidence, however, as second was the best she could do, Katle W. leading throughout and winning handily. The closing contest provided the surprise of the afternoon, Mrs. Stuart, a 10 to 1 chance getting home in front. Volley, who finished second, was the favorite. Better handled he would have won, Keefe keeping him out of it too long. When he made his rush he closed very rapidly, but it came just a trifle too late.

YESTERDAY'S TURF CONTESTS AT AQUE- THE WESTCHESTER RACING ASSOCIA-TION MEETING.

ORGANIZATION OF LAYERS OF ODDS-WHAT THE

Everybody who takes an interest in racing in this neighborhood is anxiously awaiting the opening day of the meeting of the Westchester Racing Asso tion at Morris Park on Tuesday. The general pub-lic has had a taste of racing at the Aqueduct meeting. The horses that have raced at Aqueduct are of a moderate class, principally cheap selling platers, with a sprinkling of horses that might possibly prove dangerous in the low-grade selling races that are occasionally placed upon the programme of th so-called big meetings. There is more or less inquiry among turfmen as to the means that will be used by the Jockey Club to conduct racing under the new Austin bill. The Jockey Club has held some important meetings re-cently. It has been decided to settle forever the question of issuing badges so far as the West chester, Brooklyn and Coney Island Jockey cluare concerned. Frank Clark, the superintendent of the Sheepshead Bay Racetrack, has been selected to fill the honorable post of grand master of the badges. Heretofore trainers of public stables, the owners of stables and others, could secure badges merely applying for them. The applicants for badges of admission to the racetrack will find that many radical changes have been made, and that whenever a trainer applies for badges the register book will be referred to, and each owner will receive the privileges due him when he has been fully identified and his name and the number of his badge have been recorded by Assistant Secretary Hanlon, who will represent the Jockey Club. The misuse of th badge will mean severe punishment at the hands of the Jockey Club for the person who violates th over, owners and trainers who have not entered horses at a meeting, or who have not horses quartered at the track upon which the races are to be run, will be compelled to pay just the same as any other spectator.

It has taken a week for the layers of odds to ap proach anything like a permanent organization There is nothing but fealousy and envy manifested whenever the professional layers of odds meet as a body. It is likely, however, that wise counsels will prevail and a solid, substantial, energetic and trust worthy club, composed of the leading men who are professional bettors on the racetracks, will be formed. There has been much discussion about the manner in which such clubs will assist in pro question for an association to accept money, either for persons or for privileges, from any organized club. There is nothing to prevent the racing club from sending to any individual, or any one who is a member of a club, as many tickets of admission to an inclosure upon the track as may be desired for purchase. Now, if there are seventy members of such a club as has been referred to, and each member purchases fifteen tickets at $5 each, it would amount to a total of $5,250. The purchase can do as he pleases with those tickets. He can give them to his friends or destroy them. The $5,250 will go into the exchequer of the racing association When the treasurer of a racing association de livers the number of tickets that are to be used on any one day to the chief of the ticket-sellers he has nothing more to do with them except to re ceive the returns of the ticket-sellers.

Under the foregoing method the most far-reaching construction cannot show either intent or purpose to violate the simplest technicality of the racing laws plainly demonstrated that the attendance at the races has visibly increased over the average at that the layers of odds, horse-owners and in telligent turfmen dilate upon, and that is that small purses are likely to prove a positive injury to racing If the great racing associations in the environs of the Greater New-York offer purses of the same value as those offered by the outlaw tracks, there will be no wall of high protection between legitimate and illegitimate racing. It is probable, and many men who have vast interests at stake believe, that the Jockey Club will pass a rule in the near future that no purse shall be raced for, excepting at agricultural fairs, of a less value than $500. The turf men, horse-owners, racegoers and layers of odds who desire to foster and protect racing are a unit in favor of purses of a value of $500 or upward being offered in all races in the neighborhood of

To the men who race for sport racing is rather an expensive luxury, consequently when purses are small, jockey fees high and the actual expenses of running a stable exceedingly large, the winning of a purse does not bring much more than glory to the scale. Everybody cannot own stake horses; hence the sport-loving young men who go in for racing, o would like to make turf experiments, invariably "Why, you have got to have a stake horse to pay expenses." Now, if a man had a purse horse or a selling plater that could win a race now and, then he would have sufficient margin left to pay a part of his other expenses, and that would add zest to the sport and encourage many young men to go in for racing.

There are many persons who believe that ra will regain its former prestige before the present racing season ends and that thousands will flock to racing season ends and that thousands will flock to the tracks to witness contests between fields of high-class horses. To be sure, some of the old brigade who reaped a rich harvest in the way of dividends on their racetrack shares in the old days, growl and grumble on account of the probable losses this year.

With such brilliant prospects in store the racetrack shareholders should bear their burden with bumility and meekness. It is not likely that heavy losses will be incurred this year. The expenses of managing races have been greatly reduced, and with the curtailed purses and stakes, many of which are called guaranteed stakes, which cost the racing associations nothing, there is little danger of any of the associations in this neighborhood incurring a loss this year.

The Westchester meeting which begins on Tuesday promises to excel any race meeting ever held over the hills and valleys of Morris Park. The Metropolitan handicap alone is worth going miles to see. Notwithstanding the epidemic of mild influenza that prevailed at Washington and in Monmouth County, it is probable that a high-classed field of well-known horses will go to the post. It is too early to predict the probable starters, but it is safe to say at least eight high-class horses will face the starter for the race.

horses will go to the post. It is too early to predict the probable starters, but it is safe to say at least eight high-class horses will face the starter for the race.

The three-year-olds have been doing splendidly. Handspring is as fast as ever. Requital, who retired with the champion's crown as a two-year-old, is in superb condition, and is likely to repeat his triumph of last year. Then there is that sterling filly one I Love, who is almost certain to cause the colts more or less anxiety in any race in which she starts. Hastings is in the hands of that past master of trainers, John J. Hyland, who does not say much about it, but Hyland looks as if he had something "up his sleeve" to spring upon the three-year-old division. Ben Brush is in Louieville, and was extended to the last ounce to win a "pugnosed decision" from Ben Eder in the Kentucky Derby. Ben Brush was ridden by Simms, whose superior riding caused the animal to leap long enough to win by the smallest amount. The Kentucky Derby, however, was the first race in which Ben Brush started, while his opponent was seasoned at Memphis and had been racing several weeks. Ben Brush is a glutton for work, so that the Kentucky Derby may have improved him so much that his future engagements in the West are at his mercy. It is not at all likely that he will come East until after he has filled his engagements in the neighborhood of Chieninati.

Haziet is rapidly rounding to and is again in active trim. He may prove the sumbling block in the way of the list of 'top notches' already named. He is one of the most improved horses in training, and looks every inch a racer.

David Gideon's horsea arrived at Morris Park yesteriay. Mr. Gideon has decided to leave Eakins, who is known as the Iroquois-Carloita coit, at the farm and will not race him for at least three weeks. The Gideon colors, however, will be seen at the Morris Park are rapidly filling up, and everything points to a great success. The roads to the Park are in excellent shape. The scenery is superb, and that yesterday in appropriate fashion by the Driving Club, of New-York. With two races in the interclub series and an additional special race on the card, the programme was an attractive one, and the crowd that witnessed the first public work of the trotters at Fleetwood this year was the largest seen at the old track since the Grand Circuit meeting of 1895. Every shed on the grounds housed a road horse, whose owner had driven out to the old track to see the sport, and half a hundred or more tro:ters that the stabling capacity could not accommodate were tied up to trees and hitching posts about

While two of the races on the card proved to be rather one-sides, the 2:39 class in the interclub series developed a acorching contest, which kept the big crowd guessing all the afternoon. The Brooklyn trotter, Gerald, owned by Captain Henry Hoffman, had won at Pari, way the week before, and his friends from the other side of the Bridge were confident that he could repeat the victory at Fleetwood yesterday, which would give his owner th cup. The fast black horse missed his former driver, Frederick Bedford, however, and with an unskilled reinsman in the wagon he failed to win a heat. Gerald finished first by about two lengths in the second round, but having made no less than six handy breaks in the mile he was set back to in the second round, but having made no less than six handy breaks in the mile he was set back to third place by the judges, John C. Stratton's Star Motion, who finished second, getting the heat. In the third round Gerald crashed into Star Motion, taking the rim off one of Mr. Stratton's wheels, the latter coming to a standstill in consequence of the mishap. Many borsemen expected that Gerald would be ruled out for this foul, but he was permitted to start again, and he landed in front at the finish. The horse had interfered with the others at the first turn and with Detective in the homestretch, so that when the latter came in only a length or two behind he was awarded the heat, Gerald being set back to last place. As Detective had outrotted the field in the opening heat, this decision gave him the race.

President Butler's fast horse, Baron Crisp, had no trouble in defeating Fete Curran and James Anderson in the 2:24 class. Having won last week at Parkway his victory yesterday gave him the up. Mr. Butler let the speedy gelding step along in the last heat, and he pulled the road wagon in 2:24% with apparent case.

The judges were Alexander Newberger, starter; Arthur Benson and Fred Lemmerman. Yesterday afternoon the announcement was made from the judges' stand on behalf of John T. Cornell that he stood ready to match the Brooklyn trotter, Gillette, 2:1134, against the New-York gelding, Ryland T., 2:073, for $1,000 a side, the race to take place at Parkway on Decoration Day. B. H. Demarest, who had challenged Gillette for such a race at Parkway on become heak with a counter proposition to trot at Fleetwood on July 4, saying he would not make the race for an earlier date, and that he would not trot on the Parkway track.
